

Norwegian school demand the right to full access to students private computers.

LinuxReviews.org

Students at Sola Videregående Skole in Norway are demanded to sign a contract that makes even the worst dictatorship-governed countries look like free heavens. The contract gives the school the right to go through all the files on the the students at any time they feel like doing so.

"I accept that he school at any given time can check that my computer compiles to the above rules.." says the contract the school demands that all students accept if they are to bring their private computers to the school.

Here is a translation of the contract. And no, this is not a joke, they seriously demand that the students accept this:

Contract between <full name> and Sola videregående skole.

All use will be logged. This is to be able to track illegal use

Any computer equipment used at the school are subject to the sch

The computer must and will be checked by the school before a use

Username / password are private and can not be shared with other

I accept that I can only use software which I have a valid licen

I accept that I can not have any software of like Arp or keylogg

File sharing and game playing with others over the wireless netw

I have anti-virus software installed and this will always, at an

Norwegian school demand the right to full access to students private computers. (Linux Reviews)

I accept that the school at any given time can check that my computer

I will only print out needed, school related things.

Sola vgs takes no responsibility for the private computers even

Breach of this contract will result in you being locked out of the

> Linux Reviews > News and headlines > 2005 News archive > April >

Norwegian school demand the right to full access to students private computers.